

ACADEMIC AND INTELLECTUAL FREEDOM

About the Display:

The books on display are a select collection of materials owned by the Library in the area of academic and intellectual freedom. These books, which cover a vast period -- from the days of Benjamin Franklin to present -- were selected because they effectively convey important tenets of academic and intellectual freedom, including the pursuit of truth without interference, the freedom of intellect within faith, and of course, the freedom to teach and learn. A list of pertinent holdings at Phillips Memorial Library is provided below with the call number for location within the collection.
